

Translating & the Computer 19 13th – 14th November 1997

Programme

Online Translation: MT's New Frontier Mary Flanagan, CompuServe, USA

MT Evaluation - Science or Art?
Derek Lewis, University of Exeter, UK

Remote Access Translation Services: Software Design with the User in Focus Klaus Schubert, Fachhochschule Flensburg, Germany

Personal Translation Applications lan Johnson, Sharp Laboratories of Europe Ltd, UK

Evaluation of Language Tools
Bente Maegaard, Center for Sprogteknologi, Copenhagen, Denmark

Multillingual Corpora – Current Practice and Future Trends Anthony Mark McEnery, Lancaster University, UK

"...to boldly go..."

Daniel Grasmick, SAP, and Chris Pyne, Sprache & Dokumentation, Germany

Logos as an Internet and Intranet Application F.Bruckert, LOGOS GmbH, Germany

Publishing Product Information in a Global Market Place Martyn Brougham, Pinder Plc, UK

The TM Revolution - What does it really mean? lan Gordon, Trados UK Ltd

Lexical Bottleneck in Machine Translation and Natural Language Processing: A Case Study

M. Victoria Arranz, UMIST, UK

Scania Swedish - A Basis for Multilingual Translation
Anna Sågvall Hein, Uppsala University and Ingrid Almqvist, Scani CV AB, Sweden

Machine Translation and Minority Languages Harold Somers, UMIST, UK

The European and Association for Terminology - Objectives and Plans for the Future Helmi Sonneveld, Top Term, the Netherlands

